

```
$ verydian boot --topic "durable infrastructure"
loading context ... done
```

Investors Just Priced Durable Agents At $12.5B _

Temporal doesn't sell a model or a chatbot. It sells agents that survive the session.

RUN SESSION _

arhem@verydian:~/temporal, sept 2026$ step 2

The Raise, In Real Numbers

$550M raised. $12.55B valuation. Backed by Lightspeed, Wellington, and Goldman Sachs Alternatives.

arhem@verydian:~/session vs durable$ step 3

Two Things People Call 'AI Agent'

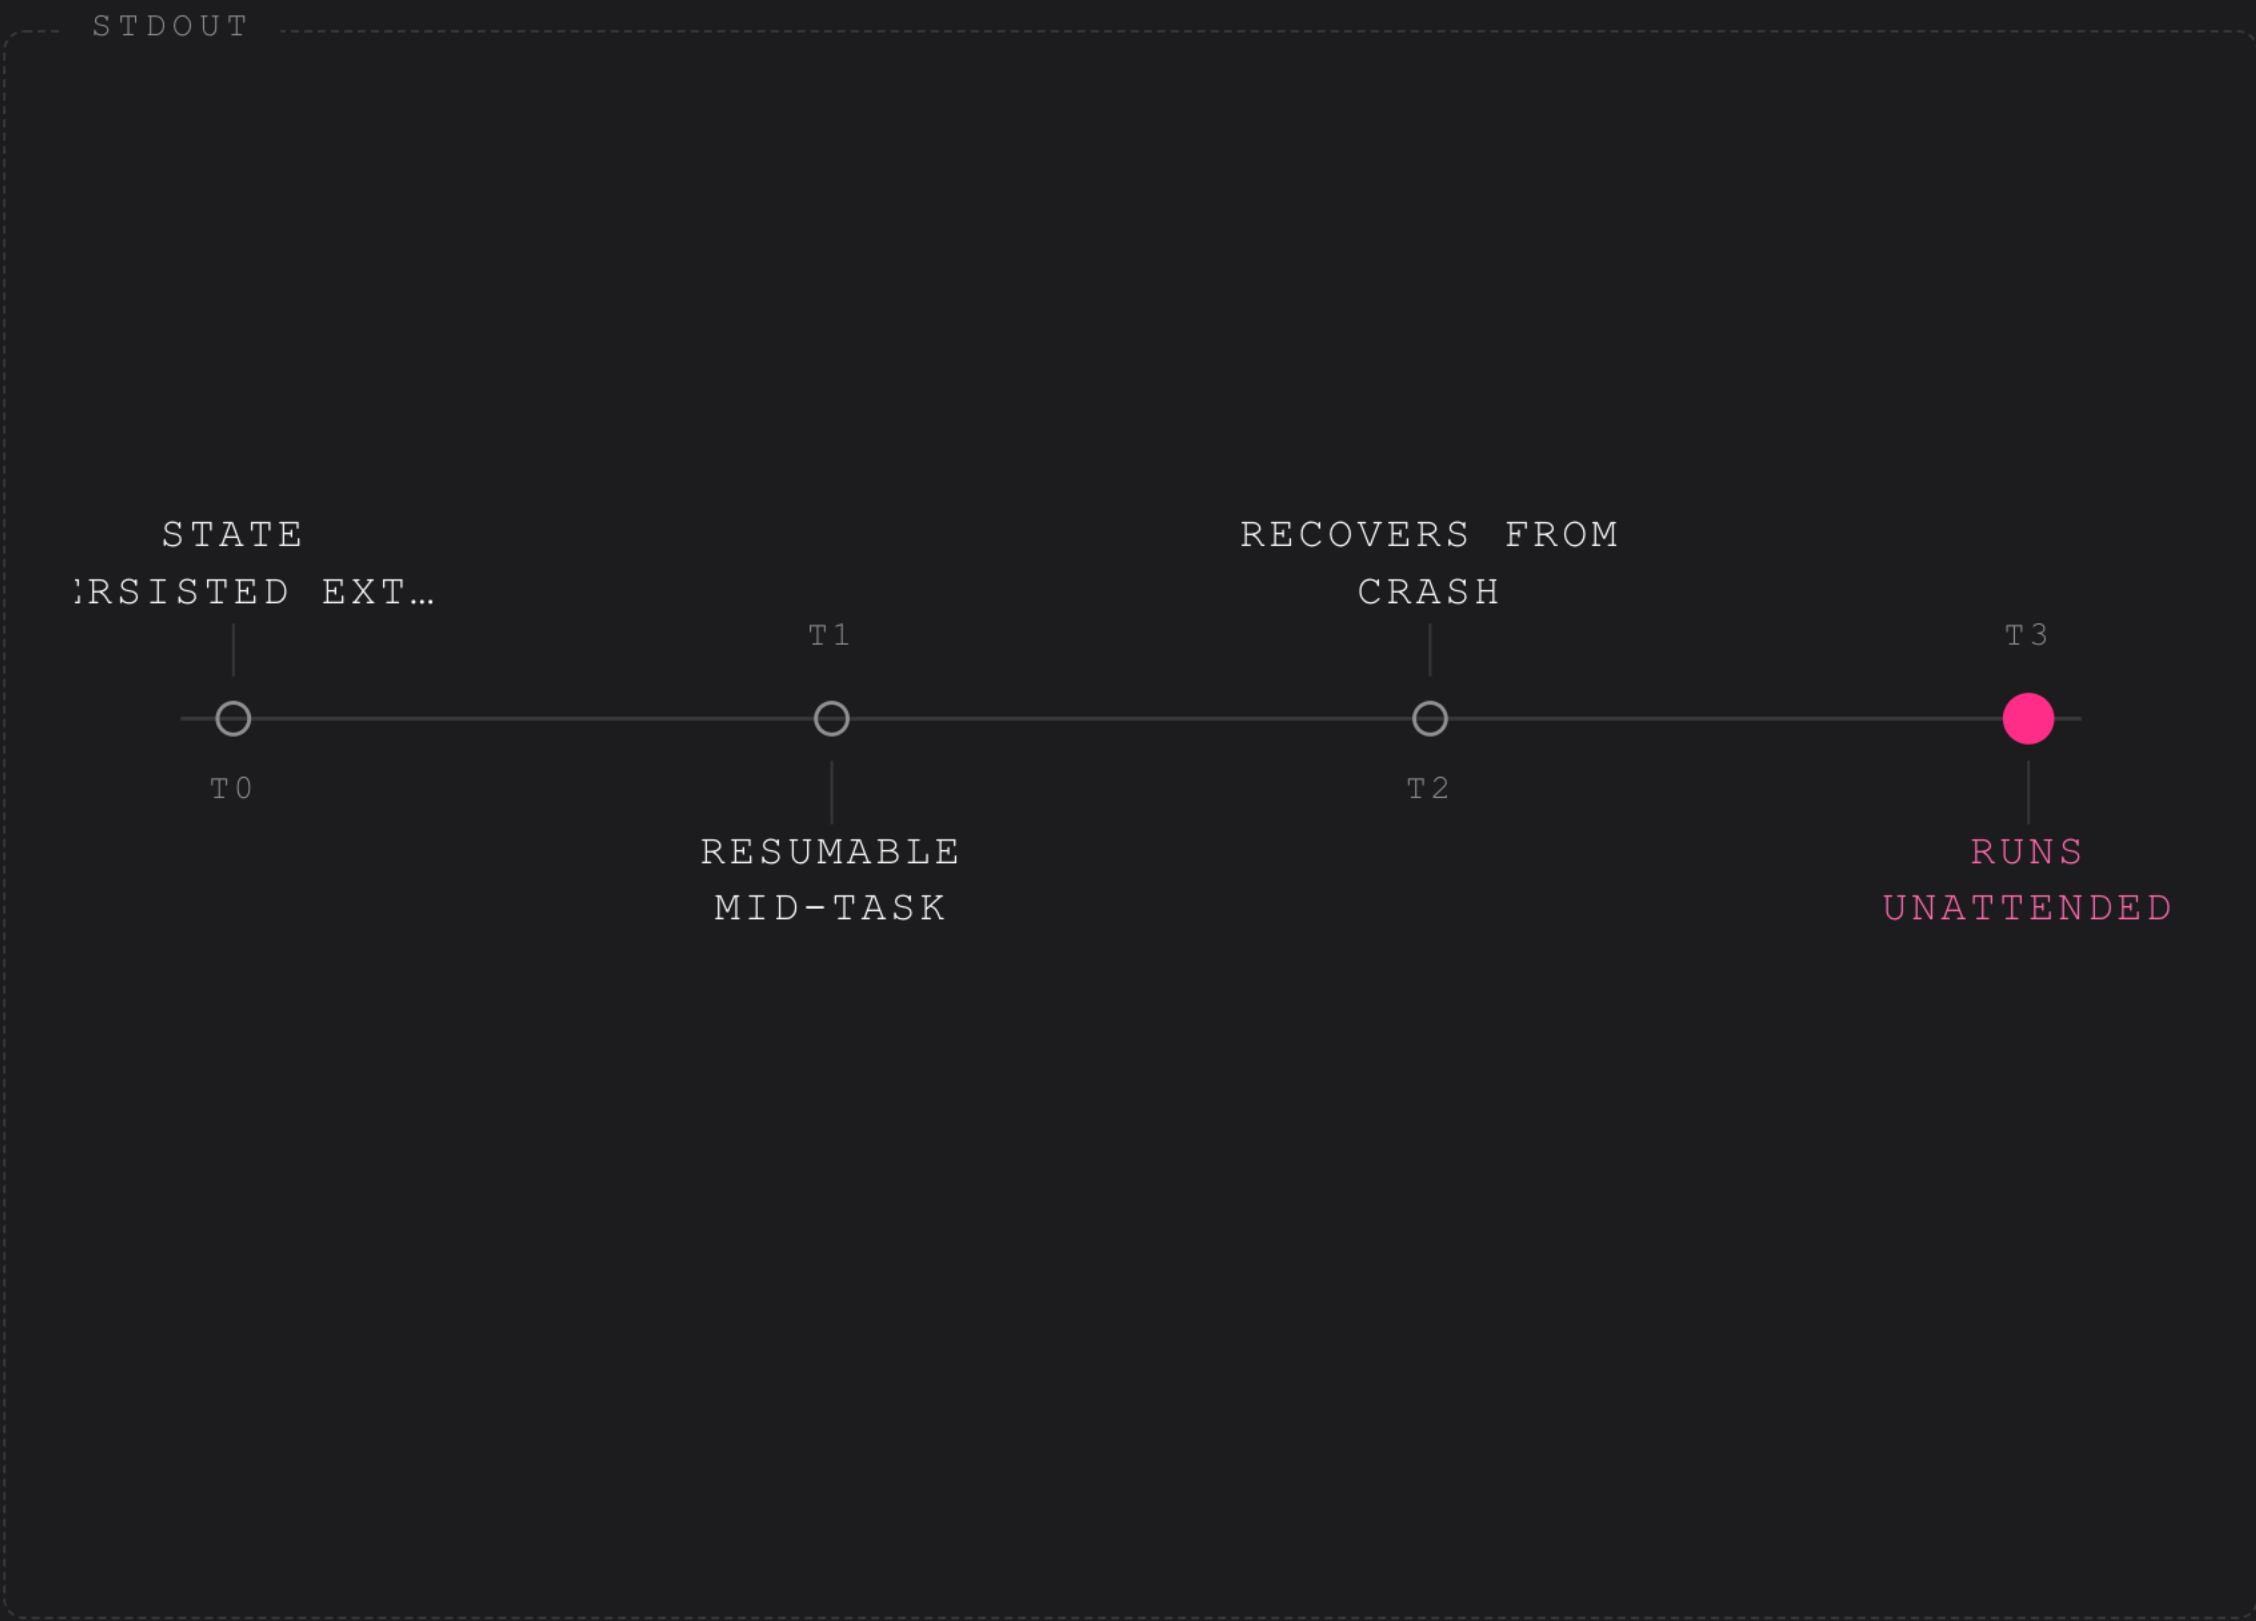

One forgets everything when the tab closes. The other is built to survive it.

```
arhem@verydian:~/the real bar$ step 4
```

What 'Durable' Actually Has To Mean

Four architectural properties, not a marketing word. Miss one and it's just a longer-lived chatbot.

arhem@verydian:~/system output$ step 5

What A Durable System Actually Logs

This is the difference between a demo and something you'd trust running while you sleep.

STDOUT

$ STATE: PERSISTED TO DISK

$ TASK: RESUMED AFTER CRASH

> SESSION: SURVIVED RESTART

Infrastructure Is The Scarce Layer Now

The model was never the hard part. Staying alive past one session is.

FOLLOW FOR THE ANALYSIS