

OPS TRANSITION

Your ops team doesn't need to shrink

The companies pulling this off aren't cutting headcount.
They're changing what the team does.

OPEN THE LEDGER

ENTRY 02 · THE REAL SHIFT

The role becomes a hub of supervision tasks

Supervising an agent replaces one repetitive task with several judgment-based ones.

ENTRY 03 · STEP ONE

Start with the most repetitive task, not the hardest

Complexity without repetition gives an agent too little signal to learn from.

ENTRY 04 · STEP TWO

Two weeks of shadow mode before anything ships

Agent and human both produce an answer daily. You compare them before the agent touches anything live.

Agent goes first now. Human reviews and approves. Nobody got cut, the job just changed shape.

ENTRY 06 · STEP FOUR

95% approval for a month unlocks the next task

Then your team manages a portfolio of agents, a more valuable skill than the manual work it replaced.

Cut headcount first and you'll have an incident, not savings

Sequence supervision before reduction.
