Cloud 24 Was Working

Two years building GTM systems for SaaS founders. Lead sourcing, outreach, CRM hygiene, appointment booking. Clients got pipeline. Business was solid.

Then I Gave an Agent the Controls

MCP-powered Claude agent managing the outreach tooling directly. Not scripted automation. Actual decisions: which leads to prioritize, when to follow up, how to adapt.

Three Weeks. Zero Human Handoffs.

One agent ran a full outreach sequence autonomously. Handled edge cases I hadn't scripted. Escalated the right things. That wasn't a GTM system anymore.

GTM Was the First Node, Not the Product

The same infrastructure logic applies everywhere: operations, reporting, onboarding, service delivery. Anywhere a human is currently acting as glue between tools.
